This is Saint Valentine's Day, and I wish I could see the look of stonishment on the old boy's face.

We are being especially careful around this newspaper. Valentine Miller works with us. We were restrained and intelligentall morning, moving about as if profoundly absorbed in some secret knowledge. But maybe tomorrow I will say "Happy yesterday, Val-entine," unless the fellows in the print shop can think of something more clever, which they're always trying to do.

Of course, we are not excep-tional, we just have a unique sitmation. All grownups find the day trying and filled with frivolous treachery at each turn. This theme of love and stuff is not one which duits handle at all well.

Kids do not find it a problem at all. They get yards and yards of red and white paper and dozens of little lace-like dollies, cut up everything into hearts and arrows, h paste everywhere, with reg candor scrawl I LUV U mmy of a bow-twanging cupid, i pass out these objets d'art to ryone in sight, counting up e's sweet conquests in the num-re of similar cards they receive return. With them, it's simply atter of ample supply. Because s mostly love everybody all of e time anyway.

But I don't know any grownup
he starts his business letters on day with "Happy Valentine dear sir, and when are you ing to clear up your little ac-mit with us?" or who could rk up enough blind courage to dictate to his secretary something such as "Roses are red, you're my Valentine true, settle my suit and PILLUV U 2."

Now you're thinking that these pretty absurd propositions, and I'll agree with you. It just s to show how adult we all are. The best we can pull off is a dutifully presented, dutifully received, quet of flowers. Or a red satin, heart-shaped, two-pound box of ocolates. With maybe a card, ich tries to get across some sort sentiment, carefully avoiding (Continued on Page Sixteen)

Councilman Whitaker Tenders Resignation

Councilman Francis Whitaker yesterday tendered a letter to Mayor Eben Whittlesey and the Carmel City Council stating that since he intends to move to Colorado approximately 1 May, 1963, he has no alternative under the circumstances but to offer his resignation from the Council, to become effective at the adjournment of the regular April meeting.

Mayor Whittlesey told the Pine Cone, "Mr. Whitaker's service has been important to the community and to his fellow councilmen. His zeal in maintaining the spirit of Carmel, and his keen interest in planning for the future, have been of great value.

"I regret, and I know the Council regret, that his change of plans and residence will make his resignation necessary."

Whitaker's term of office expires in 1964.

THE OVERRIDE TAX: THERE'S A REASON WHY, SOMEWHERE

The voter who automatically supports motherhood and the American flag is automatically going to support school taxes — and for the same reason: the emotional and patriotic appeal is irresistible; and, furthermore, it is safe. Politicians learn this lesson in the primer stage, and the voter teaches it to him.

It is to the considerable credit of the committee supporting the extension of the fifty-cent override tax before the voters of the Carmel Unified School District next Tuesday that they did not adorn the pamphlet urging a vote to renew the tax with a picture of a starving, tattered and forlorn waif pitifully extending his hands in woeful supplication — a cruel and bizarre distortion used on occasion to boost tax issues such as this. Instead, Gus Arriola has loaned the services of Ponce de Leon's bare bottom to make the point.

Appearing on the cover of the pamphlet, together with Dog, Pig, and Rooster inside, the famous character makes the appeal most ingenuous and light-hearted - a welcome relief - but he doesn't really tell the voter anything. Nor does the pamphlet. It just makes the voter think he's been told something. And on the strength of that, far too many will go to the polls Tuesday and vote "Yes." It will be nothing new; it's been going on for years.

The fact of the matter is, there may be a case for an override tax, but it doesn't appear in the pamphlet. And we might as well dispose of its arguments first, before finding out if a case can be made for the tax.

Downtown Parking Game A Battle of Wits Among Experts

With the advent of the rains have come the inevitable barrage of calls to the police department in Carmel to inquire if the parking-beat difficer was on the job with his piece of chalk.

The department has changed its answer this year. Instead of a "yes" or "no," the caller is quickly advised of the time limit for park-

The reason the bike officer is not sent out on his rounds in the rain is not that he is afraid of the wet but because of the soggy fact that the rain washes off the chalk marking and the ticket sometimes placed under the windshild becomes too blurred to read.

Overtime parking citations are issued at an average of five or six hundred per month and a never-ceasing game is played between the merchants and the officer on duty: the merchants wait until the last minute before changing their parking spot and the officer waits until the last minute before issuing a citation.

Resident merchants and their help take most of the parking spots on Ocean Avenue and were the instigators of the parking laws supposed to clear spaces for possible shoppers. But they resent a ticket like a kick in the pants.

Of course, living here and being in business, they feel privileged and it is sort of fun to beat the policeman to a ticket. But the fact remains that the ordinance they

Modest Extension of Presidential Walking Program Proposed by Expert: 100,000 Miles

The spectacle of a nation afoot, progressing in monumental episodes of fifty miles at a time, urged along by the President of the United States, the Commandant of the Marine Corps and the restive ghost of a former Chief Executive is a curious one in the eyes of N. A. Dubrow, an authority on such matters.

The biblical Hebrews and the contemporary Chinese have, at one time or another, engaged in mass walks from one place to another for some rather urgent reasons, principally to escape extinction. But the event being celebrated by peripatetic Americans is obscure, lacking any further guidance from the President, who hasn't budged from his rocking chair during all of the furor.

Dubrow finds it typically baffling that the Americans have no particular destination in mind; they're just walking. And only fifty miles.

It is too bad that the President didn't put Dubrow in charge of this mission. He has walked 100,-000 miles. It has taken him 34 years, and most of us couldn't take that much time off from our bus-inesses, no matter how patriotic or whimsically attractive the pur-pose might be. Dubrow agrees that this is why he finds so few of his fellow countrymen along the road engaged in his pastime.

Mr. Dubrow, who has a piercing eye, a bristling beard and the voice of a prophet, got started on his voyage after a healthily varied career. He once was a secretary in San Francisco. This came after being a reporter for the TV and Radio Journal in New York, interviewing song writers on Tin Pan Alley. He was also a newspaper reporter for the St. Maurice (Canada) Chronicle; a play reviewer for the Waterville, Maine, Sentinel; and publicity director for the State of Missouri at the 1939 New York World's Fair.

Since commencing to walk around a bit, he has become a sign painter, displaying not only literary discretion but artistic appreciation. But he still enjoys what others have written. His onehundred - pound pack contains mostly books-Aristotle, Thoreau, Shakespeare, Bacon and Hardy; also, a massive collection of personal diaries detailing his journeys. They are frayed and soiled and they contain careful notes such as "No rain. The clouds are broken. Walked five miles before breakfast over rough road with many puddles. Had breakfast in Bucks Harbor. Painted poster for cake sale, repaired fence. Earned $8.00, An early moon above the elm beneath which I sleep tonight."

Dubrow's moving around has a purpose, he believes: to see the world without encumbrances or prejudice. While he hasn't gotten off the North American continent in 100,000 miles, he is thinking now of heading for either Australia or South America. He started this last adventure in Brewster, Maine, and has progressed through 32 states since June, 1961.

He has been in Carmel before. This time he looked about him and did not like what he saw. "People have become too hard in Carmel, and the place has lost its freshness and energy. I've got nothing against the people, you understand. But they don't seem to have anything for Carmel anymore. It's too shiny and polished for me.' It was also the only place, outside of the South, in which he was "bothered." Being "bothered" means being questioned by the po-

Dubrow is also just a bit disappointed by the frivolity of the current passion for walking fifty miles. He feels it mocks the essential importance of what he believes in and has no purpose except as a diversion. To him it is a way of life, and its purpose is to pass with tender and reverent appreciation over the plains, through the woods, across the mountains, perpetually beneath the majesty of the open heavens, along a road that never ends, but which may at some junction expose a mean-

Long associated with John Gardiner at the Pebble Beach Tennis Club and the Tennis Ranch in Carmel Valley, Mr. Prince has had brief encounters with the business world as an optometrist and as a real estate salesman, interspersed with coaching tennis and helping Mr. Gardiner.

"I have tried these various things," the young and personable Mr. Prince stated. "But my first love is teaching tennis and I might just as well make my living at something I enjoy."

"It Was Neat"

From a fourth grade River School correspondent:—

"Our class went to the new library. It was really neat. We walked in and saw lots of shelves and books. There were chairs and tables. The librarian (Mrs. Dorothy Greenfield) showed us some books and how to use them. She said, "Don't touch the books with dirty fingers." There are at least 1400 books in the library. There are Dr. Seuss books, space books mystery books, war books, fiction books and science fiction books, We had a very nice time. There are so many nice books."

In May, 1961, seven River School parents and a group of teachers made plans to raise funds for a proposed school library. Sparked by the energies of Mrs. Howard McFann, Mrs. Richard Snyder Mrs. Richard Bell, Mrs. F. K. Duhring, Mrs. Jack Wickham, Mrs. Tom Hudson and Mrs. Warren Tor Spindler, a book fair was held which netted $1,000. Then the school board purchased equipment, and district funds in the amount of $3,600 were allocated for books. Several hundred additional volumes were obtained with National Defense Education Act funds. Room 5 was the chosen

Parents also rallied around to help Mrs. Greenfield catalog the books and arrange them on the shelves last week. And on Monday was the grand opening, with press photographers, beaming teachers and happy children.

GOVERNMENT

After attending to some minor tree trimming requests on Casanova near Eighth, the City Council last week turned athletic.

At the Forest Hill Park, they gave permission for the fences surrounding the shuffleboard court to be extended, opening up the possibility of an additional court being constructed to accomodate this popular activity.

Another activity at the park was given official approval. The putting green, carried on the mas-ter plan for the park, was approved in principle, and the Carmel Lions Club was authorized to submit a detailed proposal for the project, which they wish to undertake. The City would provide irrigation facilities and some grading; the Club would supply all materials and design.

The Council also authorized a project, in cooperation with adjacent property owners, to open Mission Street through to Second Avenue, to provide better ac school busses for Civil Defense un- to the park.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a floor-length gown of Venetian lace over taffeta. Her bouffant veil was held by a petal headdress of lace appliques embroidered with pearls. She carried a Rainbow Bible with lilies of the valley, stephanotis and bouvardia, and wore a pearl necklace her mother had worn at her own wedding. The Bible's lace cover had been made by her grandmother, Mrs. Askew.

The bridesmaid, Geraldine Kay Shepard, was similarly attired in powder blue. They carried nosegays of pink roses and carnations.

The bride's brother, Patrick Hall, served as best man. Ushers were Ronald Bennett of Los Altos, the bridegroom's step-brother; Michael Bein of San Diego and Patrick Bein of Carmel.

THUR - FRI - SAT

This week there are gifts and gadgets by the hundreds, all for 88c. You can gather an armful at piggy bank prices. Many are neat little items for Valentine gifts.

First, the pamphlet says "Renew the Carmel School District Override Tax At No Increase.

There is the story of a man who was asked what he thought of his wife. "Compared to what?" he responded.

The "No Increase" assurance provokes the same inquiry, because the assessed value of individual parcels of land has gone up in the past two years, and the total assessed valuation of the District has incr materially, from $36, 157, 440 in 1958 when the tax was first instituted, to $56, 974, 350 in 1963. Nothing compares to anything here—including cost increases which have been attendant during these years—and it is unfair to suggest that a comparison can be arrived at.

The pamphlet goes on to say that it is time to renew the tax "If we wish to continue our present educational program." But when the Board of Education wished to propose the fifty-cent tax instead of the seventy five cent tax urged by the administration and endorsed by a citizens' committee, they were told that such a tax would fall $85,000 short of producing enough revenue to support the present program.

The pamphlet also suggests that the proposed override tax is much lower than that in existence in "comparable" districts in the county. There is nothing comparable in the examples given. Look at these figures:

If you are impressed with these figures, you shouldn't be. The amount of State aid makes each of them relative to the total amount of revenue available, and it could proposition as if it were conclusive? Finally, the pamphlet says that the override tax will produce $300,000, which is approximately equivalent to the salaries of 40 be considerable. But, if this is so,

why does the pamphlet put the

What conclusion is to be extracted from that? That 40 more teachers may be employed, if the tax is succesful? Or will 40 be dropped if the tax fails? The pamphlet does not make this distinction, and by so doing symbolizes one of the worst failures of the whole campaign: the voter is given no choice.

He doesn't know what the consequence is of a "No" vote. He is urged to vote "Yes," without knowing clearly why, and left to grapple with his befuddled conscience if he votes adversely. I submit, it is not fair. Whatever his choice, he should be privileged to know the consequences, and everybody has been woefully negligent in stating them.

The administration insists that a sixty-three cent tax is necessary to support the present program. Then, why are the voters confronted with only a fifty-cent tax Perhaps because it is politically more palatable. But it isn't fac-

be the dollars - and - cents consequence of a failure to pass the tax. They infer dourly that, since 85% per cent of the budget is salaries, something will have to give somewhere, leaving the implication that it will have to be in the number of teachers. One proposal, viewed by the Board without comment, found a way to hack $43,000 of next year's proposed budge, but no teachers' salaries were involved,

This brings me to the last, and perhaps the most grave charge: there is insufficient evidence that either the Board or the administration has scraped away at the budget with courage and forthrightness. (Item:) The library book budget is $7,905, whereas the Harrison Memorial Library at which a large number of students do their studying - has a new book and magazine budget of only $5,000.

(Item:) Nearly thirty-three per cent of all students in the district are now being transported to and from school by district bus, accounting for a $58,500 operating budget for school transportation. What is not evident in this budget is such additional capital items as the recent outlay commitment of nearly $28,000 for a new bus. The present fleet of ten busses must represent a capital investment-or replacement value — of nearly $200,000.

Such fertile fields of inquiry are endless. Examination may substantiate their extent and yield. The point is, no assurance is apparent that their exploration would not be fruitful. Long experience suggests that most budgets can be trimmed, and certainly the pamphlet gives no indication that such an agony has been

Putting aside all increases in assessed valuations, other increments of income, and the frequently carping arguments about increased costs, the addition of one more school, with all of its attendant and extensive costs, probably

He was told that there was, indeed, a lot of snow. "That's interesting. I was in snow, too, at that time. Under a bridge in Alabama. It was cold all over that year, I justifies the override tax. At least, that is an argument which the voter, seeking not the reason why

A TIMELY DEVICE

United Factors, Inc. a new firm in this area, has amongst their other subsidiaries a new fire protective device.

This early warning mechanical instrument is a small self-contained wall bell developed by Interstate Engineering Corp. as an offshoot to their regular work which concerns missles and electronics.

The alarm is mounted in strategic places throughout the house and is activated by a fuse that melts at 136 degrees Fahrenheit. This approximates the heat develoed by a small handsize hair drier. In other words, before things really get hot and the fire out of hand, this alarm is clanging and banging its early warning that things are it is approved by the Underwriters Laboratories of the United States and Canada. A further stamp of approval was given by Parents Magazine.

The pros and cons and general efficacy of the Vanguard product will be discussed in detail before a meeting of the Fire Prevention Board next week.

THE DOWNWARD ASCENDING STOCKMARKET

"This upside breakthrough eliminates what might have been thought to be some developing divergence from the upswinging industrials," Gran-ville, of E. F. Hutton & Co., said. "Now both averages are fully in gear again on the upside, a comforting technical confirmation of the strong underlying major trend of the market."

From A Librarian's Notebook

By Ruth Galvin Thornburg

If you believe in killing off the mountain lion, you should read the first book to be mentioned today because it may change your mind and make you see that to destroy a species does just that much to upset the balance of nature and promote depredations from some other strata in the animal world. If you are with this librarian and believe that the mountain lion should be preserved at all cost, you should read this book because it will give you informational ammunition. The book is called Utah Lion and it was written by James Johnson. Aimed at the teen-age reader, it is so well written we bought a copy for our adult collection. One short evening's reading will do it.

Donald Cox of the Space Administration has a book entitled The Space Age, From Sputnik to Apollo. Dr. Cox has been in the business of conquering space from its very beginning and is an expert. His book is well indexed. Its only illustration is a chart depicting the progress of the various space flights. This chart is printed on the end papers of the book.

The next book is for parents. It is the sort of book that few people read until it is too late and then they are torn by the thought that they should have read it sooner. It is entitled What to Tell Your Child About Birth, Illness, Death, Divorce and Other Family Crises. It was written by Helen Arnstein in cooperation with the Child $tudy Association of American. It is an understanding sort of a book.

Quite startling and a bit frightening is Suburbia's Coddled Kids by Peter Wyden, who has two kids of his own and has lived in several suburban communities. In many ways this is a suburban community-a suburb of San Francisco, perhaps. Whether or not this book applies to you and your children, it is clever and interesting. Probably quite true, also.

The American pioneer, west of the Mississippi, is the subject of John Myers' book called The Deaths of the Braves. Through these pages stalk the great men of the old west: In the final chapter of the book the author has done a beautiful thing. He has given the reader a short breakdown of the events of the book chapter by chapter and in each case listed the names of the famous men whose deeds are mentioned in that particular chapter. For reference purposes you just can't beat an arrangement like that.

Hild Cole Espey wrote a book in 1958 which was published under the title Quiet, Yelled Mrs. Rabbit. It was a chuckle-provoking account of her life with her young children. Now they are older and her latest book about them is called Look Both Ways. It is more of the same, and very entertaining

Here are two new books about California. Here Is The Golden Gate is by Neill Wilson. It tells the history, the romance, and the derring-do of the Golden Gate and even takes a look into the future. Most of the illustrations are photographs, and among them is a beautiful one taken by Ansel Adams before the bridge was built. The other California book was written by Edna Nelson and is entitled The California Dons. It tells the fascinating story of the dons who settled California for the Spanish King, and remained here to govern the vast lands allotted to them by their grateful king. The book has an index but it is not a good one, and a halfindex is no index at all. There is no mention in it of the Carmel Mission; the only San Carlos listed there is a ship by that name. Junipero Serra is spoken of as dying near Monterey. This brings us to the sad conclusion that almost anybody can write a book, but only an expert can index one.

The old question, "Did he jump or was he pushed?", seems never to be answered in some cases. Comes now the new book by Vardis Fisher which is entitled Suicide or Murder? The Strange Death of Governor Meriwether Lewis. Meriwether Lewis died at Grinder's Stand on the Natchez Trace in October, 1809. There were strange circumstances surrounding his death, and even after Vardis Fisher sifts all the evidence on both sides, you may not be able to tell whether Lewis took his own life or was murdered. There seems to be some doubt that the body of Lewis is under the monument erected to his memory. Truly he was the neglected American.

The Long Shadow of Little Rock is by Daisy Bates, who was one of the leaders of the integrationist forces and an editor of a Little Rock newspaper. She tells the story without bitterness, and illustrates it with photographs. She begins with her life as a small child, continuing with it until the Little Rock crisis was over. Long years in library work has taught me that there is no such thing as a "must" book-not really, that is. But certainly this is a vital book and one which gives the Negro point of view clearly and honestly.

Confessions of a Gypsy Quarterback is by George Ratterman, retired from professional football with over $172,000 to his credit, and a host of funny stories to tell about his experiences. In this book he tells them. So this is a doublebarreled affair, being for people who like football, and people who like a good laugh. That takes in just about all of us.

A SAD PLAY IN ONE SHORT ACT

A cheerful man approaches the loan desk and speaks to the attendant as follows: "Could you recommend a good book for my wife? She's sick in bed and can't come in to get one herself. Reads all the time, you know! Reads everything good, just everything! No, I really don't know what she's read recently; I don't have time to check on her. All I know is that if it's a good book, she's read it. Fiction or non-fiction? You mean, is it TRUE or not? Well no. I just don't know which she likes best, but if it's a good book she'll like it. Historical fiction? You know, I don't think she's much interested in history. No, I don't really think she reads mysteries. Nothing about a lot of problems; the poor girl's sick and I suppose she'd like something without problems. Just any good book she hasn't already read. . . . Curtain.

THE LAW IN ACTION

All adults should know and avoid the dangers of fire. But what about children? In a recent case Jones rented an apartment. It had a gas wall heater whose flames flared up about 7-10 inches high. It lacked grillwork, screen, or bars to keep the flames from reaching one's clothing.

Standing before the fire, Jones' daughter got too near, harm done. and her clothes caught fire, burning her badly

Richly Romantic Program Delights County Symphony Audience

The shouts and foot-stamping of the audience at the close of last week's concert in Sunset School auditorium acknowledged the increasing excellence of the Monterey County Symphony Orchestra under the baton of its distinguished musical director, John Gosling.

In content, the concert was, to a certain extent, all of a piece throughout. Regardless of the period during which each composer wrote, or is writing, all romantic, nineteenth-century mood. In this genre, composers seem to be less involved in an intellectually aesthetic experience than in an emotional, almost sensuous one, full of color and apparent spontaneity.

This is particularly true of Walter H. Kelsey's tone poem, "Seascape," the concert's openthe concert's opening work. Mr. Kelsey has had several other compositions performed by the Symphony here, and has been a Peninsula resident since 1951. "Seascape" can be called "program music" in the best sense of the words. (A very young member of the audience was heard to whisper, "This sounds like music for a movie — a good movie.") Appealing directly to the imagination, it is crowded with tonal images that in the mind's eye are easily changed into visual images - of waves and rocks and flying spray. That such music does not require an intellectual challenge is no way questionable; on the contrary, the tonal color is as three selections shared a richly directly refreshing to the ear as is a French Impressionist painting to the eye.

> Kathryn Thompson, an amazingly talented 17-year-old, is a Salinas High School student who has studied the flute for eight years and won the Youth Audition Awards in 1962 and 1963. She performed Charles Tomlinson Griffes' "Poem for Flute and Orchestra" (the orchestra reduced to chamber-size) with serenity and grace. This lovely work is part lilting and syncopated, part haunting and plaintive. As Mr. Kelsey was quoted in reference to "Seascape," in the program notes, this, too is music written not to hurt the ears." Miss Thompson's angelic flute was a delight throughout.

The evening's climax was reached with the Symphony No. 3 in C Minor, Opus 78, by Camille Saint-Saens, a heady mixture scored for full orchestra and organ, played with musicianly authority by Myron McTavish, organist of St. Paul's Episcopal Church in Salinas, and by the beautifully modulated and cohesive orchestra.

The organ's role in this work does not have the prominence of that instrument in, for example, Handel's organ concertos; but it does give an extraordinary depth to the music, and in the passages where it emerges in solo or obligato form, provides a felicitous and often thrilling contrast to the orchestra in this melodious, richly varied and highly romantic symphony.

The county may once be proud of its orchestra; John Gosling's masterly conducting; and the continually pleasing, out-of-the-ordinary compositions chosen by him for the concert series.

WHERE THERE'S LIFE

BY ANDRE HOPE

After the ball is over there's always the fun of remembering. Remnants here and there around the house of the American Federation of Arts' "Exotica Tropicana" last week: a few orchids floating in a bowl; a twinkle now and then of the glitter with which Thaddeus dusted my hair; the marvelous fresh flower hat that Jon Graves, of N.B. Flowers, created for me; an aching back from Dale Leffler's bossa nova lesson. I love dancing so and, my, how that man

Incidentally, as we have been on the subject of interior decoration these days, I might add that decorating the interior of the Exhibit Hall at the Fairgrounds can be a little frighty. For instance, where do you get four hundred feet of fish net? I found out. You go to Jerry on Fisherman's Wharf No. 1. A very nice man, he donated this in the interests of Art. He sells all sorts of other equipment and maintains a commercial fishing boat. Would sincerely suggest that all lovers of the arts of sea and sea-scape patronize Jerry. Have a sort of romance going with our fairgrounds, too. Being an old (old) Californian, I find ours among the most unique and attractive in the State. You can hardly do anything wrong when you have Edda Kaudy, in charge of the office, and Jack Payton, in charge of the grounds, on your side. Incidentally, Edda is the gal to contact when you reserve tickets for the Monterey Folk Festival this Spring (sounds exciting) as well as our most successful Jazz Festival in the Fall.....

Meanwhile, back to decorating our interiors. You probably have one beautiful, irreplaceable, entirely lovable object in each room. It may be a piece of furniture, your fireplace, a vase, a painting (and more of these you should have) or a whatever. These are the nice things around which to build your home. Just remember before you do that you are going to have to live with them, possibly, for the rest of your life. (If in your case it happens to be the TV set-oog!) If the thing without which you would feel lorn and lost happens to be a collection of some sort, think of giving it a home that would fit in with the rest of your furniture and still show it to its best advantage. Probably this applies to your young as well. Now, you know they have all sorts of poo-daddies in their rooms and, no doubt, strewn throughout the house. Given a project to put these things into original, interesting and economy-spaced places, they might have a basis of taste for the home they will some day inhabit—beside which, it heightens their imagination and lowers your housekeeping. I know two pixie, young teen-agers who have discovered the delights of flower arrangement and miniature gardening and not only enhance their own room but grace the family table as well. Dreams of beauty can never start too young and, sometimes, even the mistakes are delightful.....

As I write, there is some sun today, buds everywhere; tender young grass, driftwood on the beach, sleeping puppies; my old buddha, smug, under the Hawaiian ferns; and Spring is refreshing itself somewhere under the storm clouds, having a beauty treatment.

Hartnell College will stage "Romeo and Juliet" on 15, 16 and 22, 23 March, under the direction of Hel Ulrici, who says that the college Little Theatre productions, and especially our Shakespearean productions, are not intended for the Salinas area, but for the whole central coast community."

The Little Theatre plays are performed by the Community Players, made up of college students and townspeople.

Noel Coward's "Fallen Angels atre Friday night, with Ruth Mc-Elroy and Betty Fowlston, both well-known to Peninsula audiences, as the angels in question. From first to last the play was theirs, and so was the audience.

As Jane Banbury and Julia Sterroll, a couple of settled-down but still hopeful English matrons, who share a long friendship and several past experiences, including an Yves-Montand-type Frenchman whom they both knew rather intimately in the course of some premarital travels on the Continent, these two stars have never shone with such Roman candle intensity. From the beginning, when it is revealed that their Gallic hero of yore has arrived in London eager great and good the second act (the high point of the play) when the two ladies, arrayed in their best, and hoping with mixed feelings for his appearance at the minister Dutch other in the form of a bottle of champagne which seems to go on and on, like the miraculous pitcher of Greek mythology (though with less beneficent consequences); to the final act, when all—wives, husbands and Frenchman—confront themselves in the improbable denouement, these two actresses dominate the play.

Of course, theirs are the dominating parts, but if it were not for consummate skill in timing, inflection, gesture, facial expression every facet of a living role these parts, including the wonderfully played (if a little long?) inebriate portion of the second act, would be, to use the teen-age vernacular, a drag. Unfortunately, the husbands, earnestly enacted by Clifford Anderson as Fred Sterroll, and Dan Coleman as Willy Banbury, were a bit of a drag, in admittedly dull roles (though surely something livelier could be made of them?) and faced with the professional finish of the McElroy-Fowlston combo. Better cast was Bertrand d'Avenas as Maurice Duclos, who seemed to be actually a charming Frenchman playing, most convincingly, the part of a charming Frenchman.

Virginia Beattie, as the oracular and definitively proper maid, Saunders, overplayed the part somewhat; but she can sit down at the piano and sing "La Vie en Rose" like a mad genius, reminding one of Mary Petty's flamboyant and slightly daft New Yorkercover maids, and for this could be forgiven almost anything.

Director Charles Thomas must take enormous credit for either skilfully deploying the talents of the two stars, or simply letting them have their heads — one is not sure which—and for capably directing the other members of the cast; although it is hoped that before the play has run its undoubtedly long and satisfying course, a little life can be breathed into the two husbands.

Ruth Jordan Allan and Charles Thomas have designed a pleasant English drawing-room set; Adele Bramlet is responsible for the decorative evening gowns in the second act; the ladies' coiffeurs are attractively styled by, Thaddeus' Hair Salon; some nice furniture has been supplied by Keller and Scott Antiques; and I particularly admired a picture on the wall (somehow I never would have imagined the Sterrolls to have such an interest in art) which was painted by Victor DiGesu.

"Fallen Angels," will run Friday, Saturday and Sunday evenings more or less indefinitely, one hopes. Dinner is served from 6:30 to 7:30 p.m. Curtain time is 8:30.

"Country In The Mind"

For those possibly disenchanted with the short-story, this anthology of stories and poems from the Western Review should not be missed—for it will speedily render them devotees of this writing form. When one story is read, the next is anticipated eagerly and devoured with no disappointment. The construction of a short story is invariably a work of art, and it is usually failure on the part of the reader's imagination and power of interpretation which creates a lack of impact.

The Western Review placed its emphasis on "youth and promise," but in the 20 years many of its contributors have become names, such as Wallace Stegner, Kenneth Rexroth, Vardis Fisher, all of whom are represented in "A Country of The Mind." The Western Review truly stated that "The time has come for Americans to place their artistic products on the world market without apology."

A Contact edition, published by Angel Island Publications, reminds us that Western Review is now merged with "Contact, The San Francisco Collection of New Writing Art, and Ideas." —S. H. T.

Auditions

John Gosling, conductor, has announced that auditions for solo roles in the Monterey County Symphony's spring performance of Honneger's "King David" will take place on Sunday at 3 p.m.

Solo parts to be filled through the audition include a soprano, a baritone and one male speaking role, that of the narrator. The tryouts will be held in room M-2 of the music building at Monterey Peninsula College.

Anyone wishing to participate is asked to come prepared with a selection of his own choice from the standard repertoire, and also to provide his own accompanist. Those interested in trying out for the role of the narrator may choose a dramatic reading.

An exciting and massive choral work, "King David" will employ a full orchestral complement as well as the combined resources of the Hartnell - Community Chorus and the recently formed Community Chorus from Monterey Peninsula College. The symphony will present this program at its closing concerts of the current season, 13 and 14 May.

WHAT'S DOING

D. D. Muir, your Telephone Manager in Carmel

On February 25th Information Operators will be giving out all telephone numbers as all numerals (ANC).

This is for all telephone numbers in the Monterey Telephone Directory.

There is no change in dialing as the numbers have the same dial openings as the letters they replace. For example FR 5-4101 becomes 375-4101.

This change is necessary to keep pace with California's telephone growth.

"PINHEADS"—that's what telephone people call these little diodes, first cousins to the transistor. And no wonder, it would take more than 1,000 of them to fill a thimble! Designed by Bell Telephone Laboratories, each pinhead's a little sandwich of specially treated silicon wafers with glass in the middle. It's heatbonded, plated with nickel and gold, and comes out a whopping 35-thousandths of an inch in diameter by 15-thousandths thick.

But looks are deceiving. Pinheads do a big job as super-sensitive "gates", or switches, for controlling current flow in electronic circuitry. They're used in computers for missile and space projects, and will ultimately be used in the highspeed electronic telephone switching systems of tomorrow.

From bulldozers to bridal gowns to beekeepers...whatever you may need, if there's someone in town who sells or serves, you'll find them fast in the Yellow Pages of your telephone book.

In fast-growing California, keeping phone books up-to-date is a big job. There are over 4.000,000 names, addresses and phone numbers in the white pages of some 60 books. Not to mention all the Yellow Pages. To assure accuracy, we check each listing six times before printing. And when the presses roll, they roll at 22 miles an hour, turning out—on the average—a new phone book for a different California community every week.

A girl who is expecting a ring will always answer the phone.

What do gophers have to do with telephone service? Not much that's good. Sometimes they chew through buried phone cables and can interrupt service. Researchers have been testing for a gopher-proof cable cover, but the little animals aren't to be outwitted. One gopher-offered glass-fiber covered cable, promptly removed the glass yarn, lugged it home, and lined its nest with it.

In all-or-nothing situations Carmel lost three ball games to the San Lorenzo Cougars last Friday, only to bounce back Monday and decisively decision the Haybalers of Hollister in three contests.

After losing four straight ball games, the Varsity finally put one of their games together and roared to a 70-56 victory. The Lightweights, carrying a 16-0 lead into the second quarter, rolled to a win. The Carmel JVs started things out in the right manner by scoring 39 points to Hollister's 30.

It was Rusty McCarthy (21) and Jim Kelley (15) leading the way for the Varsity as McCarthy hit 9 for 16 and Kelly hit three quick ones after half time to push the Padres ahead.

Skip Michelson's hustle and Jose Fernandez's "quarterbacking," coupled with the board work of Jim Belvall, contributed to the Padre win. Steve Johnson, Richard Wise and Enborg Halle showed fine relief work and it was pleasant to see Jack DeWitt back on the floor.

Led by Rich DeLorenzo (12), Pete Braudrick (10), with Davin Risdon (8) controlling the backboards and Jay Lang (6) setting up the plays, the Lightweights controlled the game to a 41-29 conclusion.

It was Bob Moffatt and Al Nishimura Night for the Carmel JVs as they scored 14 and 11 respectively. The Padrebabes pulled ahead in the second quarter, allowed the Hollister J.V's to close the gap early in the fourth quarter, and then put the game on ice in the last three minutes. The final was 39-30.

Friday was a black day for the Carmel Padres as they lost all three games to the towering San Lorenzo Cougars. The Varsity, while looking their best in four losing efforts, could not find the secret to getting even one point ahead of the Cougars, and lost 56-49. Skip Michelson in his first starting role showed Coach Dick Lawitzke lots of hustle and desire. Rusty McCarthy and Jim Kelley hit for 14 and 13 in the losing

The Lightweights of Carmel led 10-5 at the quarter and then were unable to find the handle on the ball as they lost ball after ball on bad passes and traveling. San Lorenzo continued to put on the pressure to pull out a 49-28 victory. Pete Braudrick and Davin Risdon looked good for Carmel, scoring 10 and 8 respectively.

The JVs fell behind 16-0 in the first quarter and could never make up the difference as San Lorenzo sped to a 51-24 victory. San Lorenzo had four boys 6-4 and better, with two reaching 6-6.

This week all three teams travel to Gonzales to tackle the Spartans in the home stretch of league play. Next Tuesday the King City Mustangs come to Carmel for a renewal of basketball that saw the Mustangs victorious over the Padres in the early part of the year.

Golf

A committee of Lions Club members met at Forest Hill Park last Wednesday to look furthur into the matter of a putting green. William Speller, Ernest Bixler, Ken Brown, James Buffington and August Nieto comprised the committee who paced off the distances and decided an area 40 feet by 75 feet was sufficient.

The Lions Club has offered to provide all materials for the putting green if the city through the Street Department would assist with the labor. At this meeting, William Askew, Street Superintendent, placed his men and equipment at the service of the club; He had already been authorized by the council to do so.

Approval was given by the committee at this meeting and Mr. Nieto was instructed to gather figures on the cost of installation, for submission to the committee. While the committee was involved in its deliberations at the site, Ken Brown, owner of the Village Inn, recalled that he owed Jack Morris twenty dollars for golf lessons given ten years ago. He paid it on the spot, though Morris had also forgotten the debt.

TRIGGER HAPPY

BY RICHARD BRUCE

We have talked about guns, gunpowder and the history of guns, and have ignored the most important aspect of the firearm field: SAFETY. It matters not how well acquainted you are with firearms, how carefully you handle them or how much respect you have for them, constant vigilance against carelessness must be maintained.

To cite two incidents that could have had disastrous results due to over-confidence and carelessness, I must relate the stories.

A police range officer, a man of excellent renown for his knowledge of firearms and teaching recruits and a man that had spent his entire lifetime handling guns of all description, had an accident that was very alarming but not disastrous. Mr. Gilmore had been out on the range firing a 38 special revolver, returned home and felt that he had to practice a bit of "dry firing". The best place to practice is in front of a large mirror to correct your errors. You guessed it, one shell left in the cylinder. It didn't take long to replace the mirror, but it took about two weeks to calm Mrs. Gilmore's shattered nerves.

Another accident that could have had serious consequences happened to the writer in an apartment house. A friend brought in a 32 automatic explaining unable to open the slide, that it had been jammed for a number of weeks. I removed the clip, which was empty, checked in every possible manner to ascertain if there were a shell in the chamber, all the time being assured that it WAS NOT LOADED. Again an empty gun went off, through a lamp shade, an inside plaster wall, and into a stack of dinner plates in the cupboard. The bullet completely circled the stack of plates, leaving a lead streak but not a plate chipped or cracked — why, I will never know. Ironically, this was the only wall that the bullet could have hit without entering an adjoining apartment, possibly inflicting serious injury. We need not mention all the things that I did wrong in this case. The only thing I did right was to hang a picture over the bullet hole in the

These are only two of the many accidents that I have either witnessed or have had first-hand information about. They were related to point out that a moment's carelessness or thoughtlessness can mean death or serious injury to innocent people. Many of us enjoy hunting, target shooting or just collecting fire arms, and all of us are subject to that one split second when we are not thinking. Let's all use good common sense in the handling of firearms to protect our fellow man and his property. It would be very difficult to live the rest of our lives knowing that we had injured or killed someone through our own carelessness

Sports Cars

BY ED LESLIE

This is the year when auto manufacturers the world over will spend millions of dollars to convince you that their "race-proven" auto is the one to buy. Before you pop in to pick up your "racy" car from your dealer's showroom, let me spend a few words, instead of dollars, for you.

U.S. racing in production sports cars is governed by the Sports Car Club of America rules. The rules used to insist that you race a car as purchased, although some modifications were allowed. Today, the general rule is that you must start with a production model, and that you may add the approved options available from the manufacturer for your model. You must do certain things to add safety, such as having two throttle return springs, a safety bar, some well-mounted seat belts, etc. But, here is the big one: you may improve the car by altering original parts, so long as you do not add

You can shave the head, you can grind the cam, you can lighten reciprocating (them's the ones as goes around inside, Mom) parts, you can do a lot of things. The total finished weight of the car must meet published minimums. but a good mechanic can "make it go," so to speak. It takes time and money.

Some mighty thoughty individuals spent weeks guessing which cars would probably go faster than others, and prescribed classes into which your sports car will be entered for racing. The options have a lot to do with the classes in which you find some cars. The little 1200 cc Alfa Veloce will race against the 3000 cc Austin Healey. for instance. The double overhead cam engine, Weber carbs and aluminum construction help it match the big Healey's brute horsepower.

The untested MG-B must race the all-winning TR-4, and both these cars were raised a class above last year, put in with Lotus Elites, the 3-litre Healeys and the Veloces. Promptly everyone complained it was no match. The MG-B would have no chance at all. First race out this season, a sports car magazine, a dealer and a dynamometer company extracted 140 hp from the "poor MG" and it won the race going away!

It is going to be a year of surprises in production car racing, so don't get your mind set just vet. Consider that Chevvy has a hot new StringRay that has frightened competition all winter long. Its independent suspension in the rear, new aerodynamics, and all the new power seemed to make it a sure winner. But Carrol Shelby and a little of Ford Motor Co. bought the production of the English Bristol sports car factory and strengthened the cars a bit, added the small but oh-so-potent Ford Fairlane V8, then had it approved as a production car in the same class as the StringRay.

Well, the Cobra just ate up all the StringRays. It had 7 seconds a lap to play with at Riverside. The Cobra could have won the main event over nearly all the modified cars, with a little luck!

So-o-o, now you want to buy a Cobra? Nope, not yet. You see, the $6,000 Cobra is a lot of car and it goes fast. But with options approved and installed to go racing you will need just under $9,000! You can buy special exhaust manifolds, special Weber carburetors, magnesium whels, special gears, shocks, springs, sway bars, etc.

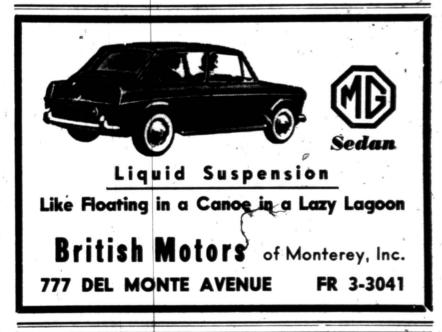

But before you take your Everyman's racing sports car out to Laguna Seca you will need a roll bar, some wide-based magnesium rims to take your racing tires. You will tear down everything and magnaflux the suspension and engine parts. You will machine off weight, cut off excess, balance, re-align, shim, polish and micropolish. You will change carburetors, try new timing settings, lots of different mixture settings, add heavy clutch springs, change to closer ratio gears, lower the difderential ratio and firm up all the suspension.

In short, your 100 hp sports car races at 150 hp. It rides like it had four bricks for tires, won't idle too steadily; but it goes quickly! What you see racing at Laguna Seca may be a 1959 model, but it might have thousands of hours of engine and parts development. You are not supposed to try to equal its cornering on the Valley road, son, because you are not driving the same car!

Stay alive!

Hugh Bayless, administrative assistant to Carmel's city clerk, spoke on non-war-caused disasters at last Thursday's luncheon meeting of the Carmel Kiwanis

According to Bayless, Carmel's disaster plan, which will soon be ready, must be implemented by personnel in key posts and with the help of civic groups and service clubs. # as fast as they came in. The police department let the cars park as they wished and stay as long as they wished, but that did not last long. Business dropped as the potential buyers found no place to light, so the merchants got together and re-installed the parking regulations.

However, with the rains, all is not serene these days and the same wearying situation presents it-

A partial solution to the problem is contained in the amendment to the Municipal Code which had a first reading at the last council meeting. It states in part: "All parking or stopping of a vehicle in one block on one side of the street shall be deemed ONE CONTINOUS PARKING or stopping, and shall be timed for time limit. . as one parking period, unless the vehicle is moved THROUGH AN INTERSECTION to another street, or across an intersection on the same street before said vehicle is re-parked ..."

This should make it easier on the officer writing up a parking violation for one of his best friends -that is, if a parking ticket officer can be said to have any friends.

If the overtime parkers would merely follow or try to understand the ordinance they brought about, the situation would be easier to live with. JUST MOVE THE CAR OUT OF THE TIME ZONE. Out of the block.

And while there is never a real peace between the police department and the public, a sort of uneasy truce will be possible.

A spokesman for the department recently stated, "We'd be much happier if they just threw out the parking ordinance as they did years ago. It would release a man for other duties and nobody would be eating us out or screaming, But officer, I tell you I DID move my car."

Editors Window

Well, a day which celebrates love is pretty much of an anachronism, anyway. If we weren't all so sentimental we'd abolish it.

Of course, celebrations like Lin-coln's Birthday, which we passed through last Tuesday more or less consciously, are great. Nothing much is expected of us except for a little reverent and general re-flection on Old Abe, which can be nicely fitted into almost anybody's explain his actions. Rusty, a sturdy little freckled guy, was "detained for his own good," until his owner, John Francis, of Sixth and Guadalupe, could be notified.

However, while being given a tour of the station house in the interest of good will, Rusty slipped away when a door was inadvertently left ajar.

Parking Game

To move it a few spaces does not constitute "removing it from a time zone." Furthermore, just rolling the car ahead seldom erases the chalk mark, and to the marking officer, a chalk mark is a chalk mark. This has been the cause of many a hassle between the department and the public. "But officer, I moved my car." "How should I know that you moved your car?" "Are you calling me a liar?" "No, sir; but the chalk mark is still there"...and so ad infinitum.

The discussions became so rancorous back in 1937, when Bob Norton was police chief, that Everett Smith, then mayor, and the town council of the time said the devil with it, and threw the tickets out
